This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when

'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.

This product is a Rust application that quickly, easily, and simply generates PDF files of slides. The slide size is set to 16:9 when 'wide' is specified as a command argument at runtime. Currently, the application only has the functionality to read text written in the program and generate PDF files. However, in the future, we plan to implement a feature that will allow the creation of slides by reading XML files.